A NEW, EXCITING, AND INTERESTING STORY IN THE LEDGER OF ROMANCE.

The proprietor of THE LEDGER OF ROMANCE is conhearing the remark that to please the popular taste it is tendency. His opinion is decidedly opposed to this sween-libel on the intelligent millions of the United States; he be lieves it is possible to write Novels, Tales and Romagees abounding with the most intense excitement, without overstep ping the bounds of modesty or morality. He is also of opinithat there is plenty of young and rising talent in the with American feeling and American tastes capable of ded before the public, are nevertheless destined to furnish

MATTHEW MAIZE, ESQ.,
the popular novelist, and author of that wonderfully interesting tale of the "Wall-street Schemer," has been for some time engaged in writing a story entitled "DEATH! On, LOST AND WON," which, for novelty and intensity has never been surpassed. A charming vein of fine feeling runs through the story, mingles with life-like scenes of deep and tragic occurrences, in which norality, like a thread of gold, binds and ornaments the devel opment of the plot.

The commencement of this new Tale will appear in No. 33 of

E A OR, T LOST AND WON.

By MATTHEW MAIZE, Esq. THE LEDGER OF ROMANCE.

The proprietor of THE LEDGER OF ROMANCE is con essary to present the public with literature tendercy. His opinion is decidedly opposed to this sweeping ing libel on the intelligent millions of the United States; he believes it is possible to write Novels, Tales and Romaness abounding with the most intense excitement without everstopping the bounds of modesty or morality. He is also of opinion that there is plenty of young and rising talent in the country with American faciling and American tastes capable of writin, American tales; men, who although their names are not pure ded before the public, are nevertheless destined to furnish their fellow countrymen with orbinal and interesting stories by far preferable to French translations and hashed-up English peri-odical literature with which we are at present deluged.

Acting on this ephaion, the proprietor of the LEDGER OF ROMANCE returns his thanks to the public for the immense success of "The GREAT HENTINGTON TALE" that is now appearing in the LEDGER OF ROMANCE. This success has induced the proprietor to me every exertion to obtain another tale of intense interest, which, he is happy to say, he has been enabled to accomplish. MATTHEW MAIZE, ESQ. the popular nevelist, and anthor of that wonderfully interesting ale of the "Wall street Schemer," has been for some time engaged in writing a story entitled

"DEATH Ox, LOST AND WON." which, for nevelty and intensity, has never been surpassed. A charming vein of fine feeling runs through the story, mingled with life-like scenes of deep and tragic occurrences, is which morally, like a thread of gold, binds and ornaments the development.

pment of the plot.

The commencement of this new Tale will appear in No. 33 of
